🏯 Joshoji temple (Site of Inatsuke Castle)

This is the site of Inatsuke Castle, said to have been built by Dokan Ota. It has been designated one of Tokyo's historic sites. On the 26th of each month, the doors to the Dokan-do Shrine that houses a wooden statue of Dokan are opened.

🌳 Shimizuzaka Park

Grass Park measures approximately 4,500 m<sup>2</sup>. It has a 52-meters-long slide, a river that flows along a wide incline, the Nature Fureai Information Hall, and many other fun facilities.

 Fuji shrine

Fujitsuka Hill, created in the Edo Period by members of the Fujiko religious order who patterned it after Mt. Fuji, is located here. Each year from June 30 to July 1, it is lively with the large number of people who come for the large festival that is held in conjunction with the first day of the climbing season for Mt. Fuji.

 Nanushinotaki Park

Originating when Oji Village head Hatano Magohachi opened up his home in the second half of the Edo period, this urban oasis has the "Otoko-daki," a waterfall with an eight-meter drop and is covered by the greenery of trees.

 Oji-inari shrine

This place is famous for serving as the setting for the well-known "Fox of Oji" from rakugo storytelling and folktales. On the Day of the Horse each February, the "Kite Fair" is held, and the area is lively with people wanting fire prevention kites.

 Central Library (Red Brick Library)

Central Library, a site of lifelong learning, is located here. It houses approximately 400,000 books, and has been built in a manner that makes it convenient for anyone to use. Why not take your lunch break sitting on the green lawn on the grounds, while gazing at the historic red brick?

 Otonashi Shinsui Park

Selected for the "Top 100 Urban Parks in Japan" and the "Handmade Hometown Award," this park is lively with people coming to see the fully blooming cherry blossoms in spring and looking to cool off by the water in summer.
